TROOPERS GUARD
THREATENED GIRLSummer Camp Focus for Police Activity After Abduction Threat.

NORTH SUTTON, N. H., Aug. 6. (AP)—National guardsmen, sheriff's deputies, motor vehicle inspectors and federal operatives guarded an exclusive girls' camp on the shores of Lake Kezar here today while the mystery of a reported threat to kidnap Betty Downes, youthful daughter of a wealthy Philadelphian, remained unsolved.

So determined was Assistant Attorney-General Thornton Lorimer, who spent the night at the camp, that nothing be done to interfere with efforts of Philadelphia police to capture the would-be abductors that he declined even to admit the Downes girl had been the object of a kidnapping threat.

However, Assistant United States Attorney-General Samuel W. Holmgren, of Concord, later told newspapermen that the name of the girl who was the object of the reported threat was Downes and that he understood her father was a railroad official in Philadelphia.

Newspaper reports from that city identified the girl as Betty Downes, 15-year-old daughter of James H. Downes, reportedly a wealthy chief of freight transportation of the Pennsylvania railroad.

Holmgren said federal agents in Philadelphia and New York had been instructed to work on the case, but that he didn't know whether the supposed threat had been sent through the mails.

Lorimer was in command of the concentration of police and detective agencies that literally overran this quiet vacation spot today. Twenty-five militiamen from Manchester patrolled the woods and roads near Camp Buono, where Miss Downes and 106 other children, largely from Philadelphia and its environs, are camped.

They were under orders of Lieutenant Calvin C. Seavey, of the 172d field artillery, acting, in turn, on orders from Adjutant General Charles W. Howard.

A squad of motor vehicle inspectors under Inspector Charles H. Magown, of Concord, scoured about the highways hereabouts while at least six deputy sheriffs of Merrimack county directly guarded the camp buildings under the watchful eye of Sheriff George Wooster.

The federal government was represented by Assistant United States Attorney Samuel W. Holmgren, of Concord, as well as by at least one undercover operative, who arrived early in the afternoon, supposedly from New York city.

N. C. Mill Strikers
Return to Labors

HIGH POINT, N. C., Aug. 6. (AP)—More than 5,000 hosiery and textile workers are to work here and in Thomasville tomorrow morning, practically ending widespread strikes which have crippled industry in this area since July 17.

Fear that a portion of the striking hosiery workers would refuse to return to their posts under the settlement arrived at last week was dissipated in a mass meeting this afternoon when leaders of the dissenters urged approximately 1,000 workers to return quietly and with a spirit of co-operation with the mill management and the national recovery act.

The settlement means the re-opening of 21 mills here and one at Thomasville.

The agreements leave but one strike in this section. Workers of the High Point Overall Company, which employs about 600, are idle and demanding that the plant operate under the NRA code. They have received no answer from the management.

Galusha operates a farm at East Creek and drove a dairymen's league "round-up" to collect milk from various farms this morning.

Troopers guarded him as he made his run into the village and delivered the milk to the plant.

A new kind of picketing began here today when women sympathizers formed a human cordon across one road, blocking state police and milk trucks.

One state police convoy was forced to take another road when the women blocked their way, one woman lying down in the road.

For the first time the 40 state police escorting the dairy "train" of milk trucks from northern New York into New York city wore steel helmets tonight as they rode.

States department of agriculture, are already in the Georgia belt-making an investigation of prices. They will remain on the ground for several days.

Throughout the first week there were conflicting reports regarding the feeling of the farmers on prices. Some markets said growers were well pleased, others said they were dissatisfied.

Mass sentiment for the acreage reduction plan in the tobacco belts where flue-cured leaf is produced—mostly in the states of Virginia, North and South Carolina, Georgia and Florida—Washington officials have said would make virtually certain the working out of such a program in the near future.

FARM RELIEF PROGRAM ON TOBACCO PREPARING

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6. (UP)—A program to adjust next year's flue-cured tobacco crop to a more equitable basis with demand requirements probably will be announced within the next two weeks, the farm relief administrators announced tonight.

They said they were cognizant of the fact that growers are confronted with excess production of a commodity, which, in its raw state, is encountering increasingly narrow market outlets and bringing inadequate returns.

Farm relief administration investigators now are studying protests from Georgia growers that when their tobacco market opened about August 2 the prices offered were unreasonably low. They also are handling complaints against the tardy opening of the South Carolina market and are expected to report fully to John B. Hinson, chief of the tobacco section, within the next week.

GIRL KILLED BY CHUM

REVERE, Mass., Aug. 6. (UP)—An outing of five girls ended in tragedy at Revere beach today when Miss Margaret Zoss, 22, of Providence, R. I., was accidentally killed by a chum at a shooting gallery.

Miss Jennie Peone, 20, of North Providence, who fired the fatal shot, was held on a charge of manslaughter, although authorities were convinced the shooting was accidental.

Key Pleads for Full Co-operation
Of NRA in Bible Class Address

Characterizing the NRA drive as the greatest effort any government had ever made to lift its people from a state of utter helplessness and chaos, Mayor James L. Key pleaded with his large non-denominational Bible class, in session at Keith's Georgia theater Sunday morning, to co-operate in every way possible to make the movement effective both in fact and theory.

Pointing out the fact that the national government had merely suggested a way for the people to help themselves, Mr. Key expressed fear of the consequences should the public rally half-heartedly.

those employed," the administrator said.

"In the presidential agreement the absolute minimum hours of any store which customarily operated more than 52 hours is 52 hours. The average number of hours which retail grocers were open was by their national committee stated to be 73 hours. They said they did not want their hours shortened because of possible loss of business.

"On this representation grocers were given special consideration and allowed 48 hours work for the employees.

"If the store hours are reduced by this agreement to any number of hours below 48 hours the re-employment which is anticipated through the allowance of the 48 hour work hours each week will not be obtained and the understanding upon which the food and grocery distributors and the retail codes was based will not have been carried out.

"The proposal to shorten hours is in violation of Section 8 of the president's re-employment agreement. Re-consideration of the provisions of the retail codes will be necessary immediately if community or concerted action to shorten store operating hours is taken.

The telegram was sent at Johnson's orders by A. D. Whiteside, the deputy administrator who handled the grocers' code, and he said Johnson awaited "a report on the resolution of your association pertaining to this vitally important subject."

Addressing the Cleveland mass meeting, Johnson called upon the nation's consumers to start buying, and for the first time gave notice that a plan was under consideration for a modified blue eagle insignia for those who cannot comply fully with the requirements of the code.

With that action he indicated that the time would be ripe to call upon the nation to buy only at stores with the NRA label.

"The timid minority which always opposes a movement of this kind calls this a boycott and holds up hands in holy horror, saying that what is proposed will ruin some worthy people who cannot do what is necessary to get the blue eagle," the administrator said. "We are making arrangements to let a man who cannot—really cannot—do all things necessary to get the full blue eagle, get one with a white bar across its breast showing the points on which that man is temporarily excused.

Two Weeks Required.

"It will take another two weeks to attend to all this, but when that time comes, no man in this country who is really doing his part will have any excuse for non-membership in NRA—at least no excuse good enough to warrant his asking for patronage at the expense of those who are making this plan succeed.

"With that attended to, it is no boycott for people who are sick of this curse of depression to patronize those who are working to get us out of it."

Apparently giving the signal for the buying campaign which he promised to support the efforts of employers who are putting out additional money for wages.

"This is no time to hoard," he said. "It is no time to save money. It is a time to get things. Buy the things you need. Spend for re-employment. If you don't spend now and get something you will spend later for taxes and doles and get nothing.

"On the other hand, if you do buy now you will help to start the upward spiral of business and make your job secure. . . .

"This moment of crisis is no time for sickly sentimentality. It is a time to face facts and realities and to put our people back to work before snow flies.

"I have heard it said that some companies cannot do what is asked of them in justice of their stockholders. We cannot believe their honest rights. But stockholders will be all right if this plan succeeds, but heaven help them if it fails.

"To put it in a nutshell: Men must earn before stocks can earn. That is as sound in economics as it is in human ethics. It is not a slogan. It is a business truth."

She was active in the church and had held many important offices, being also a member of the building committee which had charge of the erection of the first building on Baker street and the present construction at Peachtree and Fifteenth streets.

Professor and Mrs. Coon had not resided in Atlanta for the last several years. She was taken ill and died at their summer home. Funeral arrangements had not been announced Sunday.

Boy, 18, Saves Child, 4, From Burning to Death

Four-year-old Ester Blackwell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James W. Blackwell, of 1021 Wylie street, probably owes her life today to Lewis Lawson, 18 years of age, who rescued her Sunday afternoon when she was enveloped in flames from her burning dress. The child ignited her clothes while playing with matches and was seriously burned about the head, chest, arms and body, according to attaches at Grady hospital, where she was admitted. Lawson, who resides near by on Wylie street, saw the little girl in danger of burning to death and rushed to her. He tore off part of her clothing and smothered the flames with his hands. He was slightly burned. Physicians said Ester would recover.

300 GEORGIANS ARRIVE AS GUESTS OF FORD

DETROIT, Aug. 6.—Three hundred Georgia Ford owners who left Saturday night on the Ford dealers' vacation special over the Southern railway to Detroit, arrived here tonight. Tomorrow they, as guests of the dealers, will take delivery of their new Ford V-8 cars which they bought in July through the special Ford dealers' vacation offer.

This trip was arranged by the dealers in the Atlanta branch territory. All purchasers of new Ford V-8 cars were given a trip to Detroit and the Chicago World's Fair, without any additional cost being added to the purchase price of the car.

Originally it was planned to have just one train, but the idea was so popular that it was necessary for the Southern railroad to add two additional sections to be assembled in Chattanooga.

Tomorrow the train will arrive in Dearborn where the guests will breakfast on the grounds of the vast Ford activities. Then an interesting sight-seeing tour of the plants and Menlo Park properties will conclude the day. In the late afternoon the various owners will receive their cars at the plant and an ample amount of money given them to defray expenses to the Chicago fair and then home.

This drive-out is a departure from the policies of the Ford Motor Company, whose facilities for handling deliveries of the like are not maintained, and it was to compliment the dealers in the Atlanta branch territory that vacation trips and delivery of the cars was offered.

PASSENGER IS KILLED WHEN PLANE CRASHES

FLEMINGSBURG, Ky., Aug. 6.—(AP)—Non-diving from an altitude of 1,000 feet, a plane crashed this afternoon into a field near here, killing one man and causing critical injuries to another.

Crushed as the impact drove the motor back into the fuselage, Arthur O. Evers, 32, of Dayton, Ohio, died instantly. The pilot and owner, Harold G. Pearce, 23, of Spring Valley, Ohio, is in the Hayswood hospital at Mayville. Hospital attendants said he has a chance to live.

DOCTOR BEATEN BY BOY SUCCUMBS TO INJURIES

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—(AP)—Dr. Walter P. MacGibbon, 61-year-old physician, who was beaten severely in his sixty-third street apartment early Friday, died of his injuries today.

The ear, nose and throat specialist was found late Friday with a fractured skull and a broken jaw.

Do your children CONCEAL THIS THING from you?

MANY parents never realize that their children are constipated. Sometimes the child avoids the question. At other times a mumbled or hurried answer is given. All this is due to shyness. But, remember, this is never the child's fault. It is always the fault of the parent.

Get your young child to take you into his confidence. Find out why he dreads the subject of constipation. Ten to one it is the great fear he has of laxatives.

The distressing action of common laxatives is a very real fact. Even adults learn to dread it. And that is why the news about Feen-a-mint is so welcome to takers of laxatives the whole world over. Feen-a-mint is in the form of a minty chewing gum. All you do with Feen-a-mint is to chew it.

Then the saliva dissolves the laxative and carries it right along. The action inside the intestinal tract is as smooth and regular as Old Mother Nature herself. Ask your doctor about this safe and scientific Feen-a-mint. Non-habit-forming and economical. No increase in dosage. Pleasant to take. No griping. No mean feeling afterwards. All druggists have it—and that positively means all.

IT TAKES HEALTHY NERVES TO WIN THE BRITISH OPEN!

● ABOVE—IN RATING THE POPULAR CIGARETTES, Shute says, "Camels are milder, and what is even more important to any golfer, they do not jangle the nerves."

● ABOVE—TWO CONTINENTS CHEERED when slender Denmore Shute, brilliant young American golfer, with wrists of steel and nerves that never wavered, won the British Open—the tenth American champion in ten years!

● RIGHT—"I'M NOT A CHAMPION GOLFER—not even a fair one, according to Mr. Shute's standards! I'm a young married woman, interested in home and children. But with all my home duties, and the activities of our bridge club, I'm afraid that I'm inclined to be the nervous type. So I switched to Camels, for the sake of my nerves, and because Camels are definitely a milder cigarette."

Steady Smokers turn to Camels

When it comes to healthy nerves, "DENNY" SHUTE speaks with authority. "I couldn't have won the British Open if my nerves hadn't been in perfect condition," says Shute. "Healthy nerves are essential to any golfer who wants to turn in a good score. The enjoyment of cigarettes has not interfered with my golf game because I have smoked Camels right along. I have tried all the brands and long ago found that Camels are milder, and what is even more important to any golfer, they do not jangle the nerves."

"Denny" Shute offers conclusive evidence that Camels are milder. That they don't interfere with healthy nerves. That smokers like Camels better, the more they smoke them. Consider the fact that Camels are made from costlier tobaccos—and switch to them yourself. You will also discover that Camels are better for steady smoking.

How are Your Nerves

IT IS MORE FUN TO KNOW

Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE tobaccos than any other popular brand. Leaf tobaccos for cigarettes can be bought from 5¢ a pound to $1.00—but Camel pays the millions more that insure your enjoyment.

VOLUPTUOUS LINES MARK NEW GOWNS SHOWN BY PATOU

PARIS, Aug. 6.—(AP)—A new sculptured, voluptuous profile, and a feminine figure in relief, was launched today by Patou in a gala week-end show of the 1934 winter styles.

The designer, decreeing no corsets for evening wear, since they "take away the ease of movement and voluptuousness," displayed an evening mode with skirts molding the legs in a manner suggestive of pajamas when the wearer walks against the wind.

Day clothes moderating this effect followed in a slender silhouette with fullness and trimming concentrated at the back. The collection, based on "attempts at architecture, not decoration."

Fabrics were of light cottons with moderate fur trims as square bill collars outlined in astrakhan on high collars of fur.

Accessories furred effects were not used for day wear. The outstanding color was wild mulberry. A deep brownish purple was widely used for day and night in matching coat and frock ensembles trimmed with blue fox, also by black and dark green, gray and beige by day and black, navy and white by night.

Fabrics were of light cottons of pique, velvets and silk crepes.

Hats were velvet or felt toques, cupping the head, revealing the hair on the left side and swooping low on the right.

JOHNSON EXONERATES BLUE EAGLE MISUSER

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—(AP)—The Lebanon Shirt Company, whose use of the NRA emblem was criticized by the national recovery administration recently, was exonerated by General Hugh S. Johnson today.

The company used a copy of the NRA emblem in advertisements to retailers offering shirts made under conditions called for under the national textile code, stating that retailers could offer these shirts to the public under the NRA label.

Following the criticism the Lebanon Company wrote General Johnson explaining the use of the label and pointing out the fact that the advertisement was addressed to the retail trade in a trade journal, and not to the public.

Johnson stated that the use of the NRA emblem in connection with the shirts for the attention of the public could not be made before August 15.

Bank 'Balances Books' On Food for Kidnapers

In the matter of food, the First National bank balanced its books with William Delenski Sunday night.

On the afternoon of July 6, when John K. Otley Sr. and young Pryor Bowen, Delenski's accomplices, had made their way to the general store at Suwanee, Mr. Otley was weary, hot and without funds. While blindfolded he had given Delenski his billfold. The banker and Bowen drank soda water, and Bowen paid the bill.

The first meal Delenski ate after being delivered to the police station Sunday night was steak dinner, paid for by Frank Berry, cashier of the First National bank.

Settle To Try Again To Visit Stratosphere

CHICAGO, Aug. 6.—(UP)—Undaunted by the near-disaster which ended his first attempt to ascend in a huge balloon into the stratosphere, Lieutenant Commander T. W. C. Settle tonight made plans for a second take-off.

Although no definite date was set for the new trial, the unperturbed flyer hoped it would be "very soon."

His first ascent took place 2 a. m. yesterday ended shortly afterward when a leaking gas valve on the giant craft forced him to land in a railroad yard near Soldier Field, whence he had taken off.

Minor damage to the balloon will be repaired in time for the commander to make another effort late this summer or in early fall.

DIVER RECOVERS BODY LOST MONTH IN MINE

POTTSVILLE, Pa., Aug. 6.—(AP)—Upditching bodies of mine accident victims must be recovered, Gunnar Mate Jesse Gose, a navy diver, today located the body of Frank Thompson, young Sunday school superintendent, beneath 115 feet of water in an abandoned mine at Keffers, near here.

Miners said it was the first time a diver had been called into the an thracite area for work of this kind. Thompson, who was 28, lost his life on July 12, while mining coal. His body was found in a makeshift chamber, the floor of which collapsed after a blast had been set off and hurled him into the old mine, abandoned 67 years ago.

DELENSKI RECOVERED ADmits KIDNAPING

Delenski, a mid-mannered, brown-haired, blue-eyed youth whose appearance is that of anybody except a kidnaper, "opened up" when newspapermen called on him as he ate supper, and "told all." Chief Sturdivant had previously told reporters that Delenski had made a clean breast and confirmed the story told by Pryor Bowen, the co-defendant, who turned the banker loose while Delenski was away delivered to the police.

Let's Banker's Glasses.

"What the chief says is, no," said Delenski. "What do you boys want to know?"

"What did you do with Mr. Otley's glasses?" a reporter asked. "He couldn't hardly see his way around during the search for you and had to borrow some glasses."

"Oh, they got lost somewhere," Delenski replied. "I tried to keep them with me, but I couldn't guarantee to act as mascot for his glasses all the time."

Where did you go after you found out the game was up?" Delenski was asked.

"I stuck around Suwanee for two days," he said. "Then I got back to Otley's place by hitch-hike and found Mr. Otley's car in a garage. I got a ride in a truck. That was when Bowen saw me and pointed me out to a cop. Soon afterward I was taken to a jail and put in a lady's cell. She asked me, 'Have they got the kidnaper yet?' and I lit out into the woods. Once Bowen and a bunch of cops passed by on the road, but didn't see me."

"I spent two nights in trees, with dogs howling all around. That cured me of dogs, and I never want to own a dog as long as I live. I made up my mind on that then. I hate 'em. The dogs came close lots of times, accompanied by men, but they always missed me, somehow."

Delenski was highly nervous when he alighted from the plane, and his speech was still more upset by the sight of the crowd and the excitement of being photographed by half-a-dozen newspapers. Asked at the tower why he appeared so nervous, Delenski answered: "Listen, I'd heard about those Ku Kluxers in Georgia for a long time, and when I saw that crowd, I just knew they were bad."

"How much hope did you have of getting any money from Mr. Otley?" Delenski was asked.

"He gave me a check for $400.00 right away after I threw that scare into him," Delenski said.

"But a check wouldn't have done you any good. You would have had a time getting one that big cashed up."

"Oh, sure, but I was just speaking relatively."

Amplifying his reasons for picking Mr. Otley as the victim, Delenski said that he had heard so much about the banker being a rich man, that he thought it would be an easy thing to put over. "I thought I would make a lot of money, because I was desperate," he said.

"What were you desperate about?" "I hadn't eaten for days, and I was starving, and when I felt like that I'd do most anything."

"How did you propose to keep the banker until the negotiations went through?"

"I had a pup tent, and I was going to put it up and make him live in it until we got the money."

"Why did you write your mother in Miami when you knew almost for certain that your home would be watched?"

"I knew 'It Was Suicide.'"

"What boys, when a fellow gets in my fix, he'll take lots of chances. I knew it was suicide, but when you are hunted and desperate, your thoughts are all mixed up. I didn't know it was the same as giving up. I would have done it."

"Kidnaping is a serious crime in this state. Why didn't you pick a lighter violation if you wanted to get food?" Delenski was asked.

"Twenty years (the maximum under Georgia law for kidnaping) or three years (the maximum for a minor violation) is all the same to me," he answered.

Delenski said that he was picked up in Houston, Texas, by police on a charge of vagrancy 10 days ago, but was released after being interrogated.

You must have had a few hard moments," a newspaperman said.

"Boy, you don't know the half of it," Delenski said. "I thought they had me for certain."

Delenski said that he hitch-hiked and bummed his way from Houston to San Antonio, frequently not getting enough to eat. He appeared to be hungry and the fellow getting the food and the prospect of eating regularly, "even if it is in here."

Delenski said that when he was picked up in San Antonio he was taken to a jail and put in a cell with an old prospector whom he met in that city. "The old fellow almost kidnapped me to get me to go along," Delenski smiled. "He had prospects of a great deal some years before, and had all sorts of credentials."

Len B. Guillebeau, attorney for Bowen, met Delenski and took hands. "I want to thank you for the money in which you have explained the details of this case and come clean," Guillebeau said. "Tell the kid I don't hold any hard feelings against him. Delenski replied, 'I hope he gets clear of it.'"

Delenski denied that he called at the Atlanta "flap house" and asked for Bowen after the kidnapping was exposed. "The guy who said I called by and inquired for Bowen was mistaken," he said. "At that time, I was thinking about getting away and not about looking up Bowen."

"Well, I expect I'll get the limit, but I hope they won't be too hard," Delenski said at the conclusion of the interview. "Now, don't you boys paint me as a big, hard gorilla."

Chief Sturdivant said that he discussed the case with Delenski all of the way from Dallas to Atlanta, "except when the way was so sick from air-riding that he couldn't talk—and he was sick a good bit after the ship got under way."

Corroborates Bowen's Story.

"It was his first trip," Sturdivant said. "And he got a big thrill out of it until we hit some bumpy atmosphere. We hurried as much as we could on the entire trip to Texas and back, because we wanted to get there in time to catch him, and we had to hurry back before he would have a chance to change his mind and fight extradition."

"Delenski came clean with me, and told me all of the details of the kidnapping. He corroborated everything that Pryor Bowen has told us. We kept him in the army post at San Antonio until train time Saturday night, and went by train to Dallas, where we caught him at the airport."

Attorney Guillebeau said that Bowen claims that he was forced into the kidnapping before he knew what it was all about. Offered a good money to leave the proposition, Bowen went into the details with Delenski, and obtained too much information on the job to back out gracefully before he realized what he was up against, Guillebeau said.

"Bowen tells me that Delenski kept him at his side constantly for two days before the kidnapping, not daring to let the boy out of his sight," Guillebeau said. "Bowen then determined to go through with it and to let Delenski have a chance to get away, fearing that if he backed out he would be 'bumped off.'"

Bowen, while in charge of an officer beside a road near the spot where Delenski was picked up, was riding by aboard a truck, and called out, "That's the man." The officer was unable to pursue the truck, as he could not drive Bowen with him, and Delenski was able to leave him, and the truck went on. Chief Sturdivant, who led the search at Suwanee, later was informed of the incident, and attempted to catch Delenski, but he had already escaped.

Reaching Cumming, Ga., after his escape from the Suwanee vicinity, Delenski hitch-hiked and hopped his way west, he said.

Delenski did not meet Bowen Sunday night on his arrival at the jail, although Bowen was escorted to the front office for a conference with the police. Delenski was taken to a cell, and Delenski was having his supper. Delenski was locked up for the night without being confronted by Mr. Otley, but the police said they were going to view the defendant, it was said.

Five letters addressed to Delenski in care of general delivery presumably are being held at the Atlanta postoffice, the confidential source said. A watch has been maintained at the postoffice since July 8, when a department of justice investigator called for mail addressed to Delenski and got one that big cashed up. Letters were tossed out on the counter.

Two of the letters bore a New York postmark and two had been mailed in Miami, where Delenski's parents reside. The letters were addressed to Delenski, but the addresses were not disturbed. But a description of the fugitive was furnished postoffice employees and the Atlanta police maintained a watch on the letters. Delenski was prepared to arrest the man should he appear.

It is presumed that Delenski can claim the letters and that they will be delivered to him.

Seeks Part of Reward for Bowen.

Len B. Guillebeau, attorney for Bowen, announced Sunday that he is claiming on behalf of his client for a share of the reward money for Delenski's capture. He said he was supplied information which led to Delenski's room in Atlanta being found and the man's subsequent arrest.

Delenski waived extradition, speeding up his return. Solicitor-General John A. Boykin said Sunday that the kidnapping case will be placed on the calendar of superior court Monday morning, when the case will be taken to the first defendant to face trial.

Delenski, alias Bob Williams, alias B. A. Williams, alias Grover Williams, alias Robert A. Hathaway, was picked up in San Antonio Saturday by E. A. Parker, of the United States bureau, and taken to the San Antonio military post. Identification was accomplished with the aid of pictures circulated by Atlanta police and Bowen.

Chief Sturdivant, Detective Ginn, and John Otley Jr. had been in San Antonio Thursday, searching for Delenski after officers intercepted a postcard addressed to Mr. A. B. Williams, of Miami, Fla., by her son. The postcard, signed "R," directed Mrs. Delenski to send his suitcase to San Antonio in care of "B. A. Williams." The receipt was sent in care of general delivery.

Delenski did not show up near the postoffice until Saturday, just as the guard posted at the federal building ready to go into Miami. The two officers recognized Delenski from his pictures and made the arrest. Searching Delenski, the officers found only a pair of pliers and a workman's tool. Delenski was taken to the central relief committee of San Antonio.

Admitted Identity.

The man who gave up his identity, officers said. He was identified by young Otley as the man who established a small fruit stand in front of the Otley home on Peachtree road just prior to the kidnapping. Mr. Otley was kidnapped on July 6 as he was leaving his home for the bank. A youth appeared on the road near the Otley home, and was signaled for a ride to the town. Otley stopped to pick up the boy, and a few seconds later was a prisoner in his own car, headed for a lonely spot near Suwanee, Ga., where he was held for several hours before he accomplished his escape.

Mr. Guillebeau's statement in behalf of Bowen was as follows:

"I am filling out a reward claim for a share of the rewards that have been offered for the capture of William Delenski. The very foundation of the successful recovery of Delenski was information furnished by Bowen who told the officers that Delenski had stated that he had occupied a certain room here for about three months and that on account of being unable to pay the rent Delenski could not go back to this room which contained Delenski's personal belongings. This information was published in the newspapers and this resulted in the room being found and the identity of the kidnaper being definitely established as Delenski. Chief Sturdivant and all the officers have done fine work, but it has all been based upon information furnished by Bowen, and I am going to insist that Bowen have a reasonable share of the reward."

Delenski's police record on file at the department of justice in Washington shows that he was arrested in New York city January 24, 1930, on two charges of vagrancy and was abandoned. He served a term at Blackwell Island, a penal institution, on one of the charges but disposition of the abandonment charge was not recorded.

Last February 15 he was arrested in Rock Hill, S. C., on a charge of carrying concealed weapons and trespassing and fined $25. The Rock Hill police station showed that he was a police station that the fine was paid with money telegraphed from Miami by a young woman friend of Delenski.

FRIENDLY COUNSEL

BY CAROLINE CHATFIELD

Problems of general interest submitted by readers will be discussed in this column. Correspondence invited. Your name held in confidence. Write Miss Chatfield, care The Atlanta Constitution.

DEAR MISS CHATFIELD:

I am one of the unfortunate people who is cursed with a sensitive disposition. I am one of a large family and ever since I can remember my feelings have been hurt by one of my brothers or sisters. My good time was ruined when I was in high school by the same thing and now that I have gone to work in an office where there are other stenographers and clerks I am still having trouble with my feelings. I always feel that somebody is laughing at me for my mistakes and that causes me to make more. What shall I do to overcome this fault? SENSITIVE.

ANSWER:

Once upon a time women were supposed to live by their feelings. But this is a new world for women and "feelings" are not a good medium of exchange in any of the markets, with the possible exception of the marriage market. Even there "feelings" must be backed up by brains or the bargain she takes home turns out to be a bargain at all but a sell-out.

Probably the psychology teachers would blame your parents for letting you get out into the world without the experience you need to overcome the inborn tendencies that trouble them. I know a mother who, with apparent heartlessness, laughed at a pigeon-toed daughter until she broke her of turning her toes in. It happened when the young girl was not sensitive and she had a sense of humor which was easily touched. The mimicry of the mother amused her to such an extent that she determined not to be a laughing stock.

This mother would have used those same tactics on a sensitive daughter, for she was concerned only with getting the toes turned out. If the child had been sensitive the experience would have been ruinous and the mother would have done her child far more harm than good. You probably had some unfortunate experience when you were very young that left its scar on you and this scar is self-consciousness or sensitivity.

All the animals are born with instincts. Experience intensifies them and no matter how old they grow they never have anything better than these instincts. And the experience which these instincts provide. They feel instinctively that danger lies in certain directions. They feel instinctively that the larger, more powerful animal is a probable enemy. There is a funny picture of an African water hole which illustrates the point. From a concealed position the camera caught the different animals coming down to the water hole to drink. The hole was small and only a few at a time could get their heads to the water. Who went first? The biggest. Who went last? The smallest. Instinctively they knew how to take care of themselves.

We have one huge advantage over the animals. When our instinctive feelings are burdensome, or when they are inconvenient, or when they

Miss Grace Boynton Freeman Marries Hubert R. Surratt

Of widespread social interest throughout the state was the marriage Sunday of Miss Grace Boynton Freeman to Hubert R. Surratt, which was solemnized at 2:30 o'clock at the summer home of the bride's brother and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Turner, in Clayton, Ga. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Alfred R. Surratt, of Charlotte, N. C., father of the groom, in the presence of the families and a few close friends.

An improvised altar was arranged before the massive rock mantel in the living room and was formed of mountain laurel and woods fern, before which stood pedestals baskets filled with the sunset shades of gladioli. Lovely old wrought iron candelabra with burning tapers were used at each end of the mantel, which formed a perfect arrangement for the rustic background. The remainder of the home was decorated throughout with yellow and white dahlias and wild flowers of the same shades. A program of music was rendered before the ceremony by Mrs. Byron Turner, of St. Petersburg, Fla., who played "Sweet Mystery of Life" during the ceremony and Mrs. Avery Cunningham sang "If Love You Truly" preceding the ceremony.

The bride, who is of the lovely Titian type, was becomingly attired in a model of pale gold mousseline de soire, made floor length with light fitting bodice, the skirt having four large ruffles, and a cape was used of the same material, with ruffles forming the sleeves. Her accessories were in white and she carried an arm bouquet of yellow Johanna Hill roses showered with lilies of the valley.

Following the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Turner entertained for the bride and groom and wedding guests. The decorative motif of yellow and white was carried out in the refreshments.

Mrs. Surratt is the youngest daughter of Mrs. Samuel D. Freeman and comes from representative southern families on both sides, being a great niece of Governor James S. Boynton of Georgia, on her maternal side. Her sisters are Miss Corinne Freeman and Mrs. Paul Turner.

Mr. Surratt is the only child of Rev. Mr. Alfred R. Surratt, of Charlotte, N. C. His cousins are Mr. and Mrs. Robert Scott, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Paris and Mr. and Mrs. Cannon Young, of Atlanta. Ernest Carson, of Charlotte, is his uncle. Mr. Surratt has made his home in Atlanta for several years.

After a wedding trip to Asheville and other points of interest in North Carolina, Mr. and Mrs. Surratt will reside at 4 Wesley avenue, N. E. The bride traveled in a two-piece suit of brown satin, worn with brown hat and harmonizing accessories.

INSTALLMENT XXIX.

"Well, here you are—both of you," a voice said smoothly. "I thought you'd come back here."

It was Detective Flaherty!

"I'm sorry, kids, but you'll have to come along to headquarters. Don't think I like taking you. I got a son and daughter of my own about your ages."

Mary was sobbing pitifully in Tommy's arms. Tommy pleaded desperately.

"I don't care what you do with me, if you let Mary go. She didn't have a thing to do with it."

Flaherty was firm. Mary clung to Tommy.

"I want to go if you go, Tommy. It's as much my fault as yours."

"Don't say that," Tommy cried indignantly. "They won't understand if you keep saying you're to blame. You didn't have anything to do with it, honey. I lost my head, that's all. And you would, too, officer, if you saw your girl being taken away by a rich old duffer who couldn't make her happy."

"Sure I would," Flaherty nodded sympathetically. "But that doesn't say I'd murder the guy to keep him from it."

"Don't!" Mary begged hysterically. "Oh, don't say Mr. Little is going to die. Tommy couldn't murder anybody."

"The doctors say there isn't much chance of his pullin' through," Flaherty said gravely. "It might have looked like just a fight to you. But when a man falls and strikes his head and gets a fracture and dies—that's the same as murder in the courts."

Tommy shrugged helplessly—then said gently to Mary:

"Come, sweetheart. Officer Flaherty has been fair to us—lettin' us explain and everything—we mustn't keep him waiting any longer. It'll turn out all right—I'm not afraid."

Mary knew she had to brace up for Tommy's sake. She wasn't worried for herself. She was quite certain they wouldn't blame her. But Tommy needed her and she mustn't fail him. She drew herself up and smiled crookedly, wiping her eyes:

"There's nothing to be afraid of when you know you didn't mean to do wrong, Tommy, I'm—I'm not worried."

Flaherty smiled a kindly, gentle smile that was meant to be reassuring.

"That's the spirit, sister. I'll do everything I can for you two little love birds. You can count on that."

Mary was so grateful she wanted to kiss him. Tommy held out his hand:

"Let's shake hands—and be friends. I feel better now."

Flaherty gripped his hand warmly. Tommy held Mary to him and kissed the top of her little head before they left the apartment. Flaherty was busy looking out the window. In a moment he turned and they walked out silently. Tommy supporting Mary with his arm as they walked down the stairs. Flaherty nodded to the detective that sat in his car.

"Take us to headquarters, Pete."

It was the next day that Dr. Sawyer, an hour out of Los Angeles, decided to kill the time that dragged by like eternity by reading a paper. He bought one from a boy who came through the train and stared at the headline:

MOVIE MOGUL BELIEVED DYING.

Financed by Little May Be Held With Home-Town Suits for Murder.

The paper swam before Dr. Sawyer's eyes. There on the front page was a picture of his daughter. A striking likeness of Mary's head that he had almost life size. Underneath was a smaller pose of Tommy. He knew then he'd been too late. Dr. Sawyer aged 10 years as he read the story.

"Mary Mansfield Sawyer, beautiful 18-year-old daughter of Dr. Mansfield Sawyer, of Millstream, Va., after an all-night grilling by the authorities, stuck to her story that the fall which Curt Little, millionaire movie mogul, met in his airplane yesterday afternoon was accidental. Little, badly injured, is believed dying in Jennings hospital."

"Held with Miss Sawyer is Thomas Smith, 19, also of Millstream, who until a few weeks ago was engaged to Miss Sawyer. He admits a fight took place in Little's airplane yesterday when he rushed to the Little estate to try to prevent his former fiancée eloping with the multi-millionaire to Mexico, but denies intended murder."

"Fulton Slater, pilot, was in his cabin but denies having heard the fight. He is being held pending the death or recovery of the movie promoter."

"An effort will be made to question 'Freckle' Bryan, movie commode, with whom Miss Sawyer lived, today. Miss Bryan underwent a serious operation in Jennings hospital last night and is said to be in a serious condition."

There were several stories, but Dr. Sawyer had learned enough. The world, he felt, had tumbled about his ears.

Broken, with a great fear tearing at his heart, Dr. Sawyer got off the train at Los Angeles and took a taxi to police headquarters. Hours later he was still pleading for the chance to see Mary. He had been in and out of a dozen offices, dazed, incompetent, an old man who was so frantic no one paid any attention to him.

Late in the afternoon he had almost given up hope of ever seeing his child. But he had to find out who Curt Little was—and he would live. So, feverishly, he searched for a street car that would take him to the Jennings hospital.

It was a small private hospital. There was a courteous-looking older nurse at the information desk. Dr. Sawyer approached her timidly.

"Madame," he said in his gentle southern drawl, "if you'd be so kind I'd like to see Mr. Curt Little."

The nurse shook her head.

"I'm sorry—the doctor has left orders that no one is to see Mr. Little. He is still unconscious."

"Couldn't I," his voice broke, "couldn't I just take a little look at him, nurse? I'm—I'm a doctor myself."

"Curt closed his eyes wearily. He was still very dizzy.

"I'm afraid I don't know much about it."

"We've got the boy and the girl locked up—waiting your orders," Powell smiled unctuously. "They'll get the limit. Feel like telling me how it happened?"

Curt half rose on his elbow. The nurse hurriedly crossed the room and begged him to lie down. He said angrily:

"You—haven't locked Miss Sawyer?"

"Sure—why not?" Powell shrugged, "she and the boy both. What were they trying to do? Make a getaway with some of your dough. Was it a little bit much, huh?"

ROUND TABLE OF BUSINESS

A General Weekly Review of Commerce and Industry Affecting the Greater Atlanta Trade Territory

Increased Registration at Brenau College Is Seen for Fall Opening

ADEQUATE PLANT AND CURRICULUM ARE RATED HIGHLY

Social, Cultural and Recreational Life Stressed; Fine Arts Given Prominent Place.

By TALLU FISH.
GAINESVILLE, Ga., Aug. 6.—Using "The Nation as Our Campus" for the motto of Brenau College here, a more cosmopolitan student body cannot be found in the south. For a score of years Brenau has had from 32 to 40 states and countries represented on its student rolls, which includes a registration of more than 500.

Marking its 55th opening on September 12, President H. J. Pearce states an increase over last year's student registration is probable.

It is a far cry from the little pioneer Georgia Baptist female seminary, to the Brenau of today, which is non-sectarian, boasts 35 buildings and owns a campus of more than 300 wooded acres. It also has two lakes, 20 miles of bridge paths and maintains its own stable of fine horses.

The college also has a recreation camp in the heart of the Lake Burton section, a well equipped corrective gymnasium, and a modern swimming pool, with showers and dressing rooms on the mezzanine of the natatorium.

Special attention is given at Brenau to the social, cultural and recreational life of the student. A decided asset to the college, as they are to any institution, are the 10 national social societies, the nine honorary scholastic societies and fraternities, and the numerous clubs and other organizations. An active Y. W. C. A. is fostered at the college, as well as a well organized student government association.

Brenau maintains also an academy for secondary education with Miss Cecelia B. Branham as dean. It will open September 12. Miss Branham also is director of Camp Takeda, Brenau's "Ideal Camp for Girls," which is in session at present with 50 girls from five states enjoying "Making Play Worthwhile."

Dr. J. B. Gallant is director of the summer school, which recently concluded its 1933 session.

"Standard" is the one word which

Goats' Milk Is Prescribed For Stomach Sufferers' Use

An Atlanta school teacher, one of many who frequently take their classes to visit and inspect the Westwyndes Goat Dairy, near Chamblee, is shown here with one of the fine Nubian goats, which make up the Westwyndes herds. Children, on their visits, are taught the beneficial effects of goats' milk in the daily diet.

Take a tip from the doctor. He knows! The Westwyndes Goat Dairy offers the way to health—through milk from purebred Nubian goats.

Goats' milk, according to the advice of countless physicians not only in the Atlanta territory but throughout the world, long have prescribed goats' milk in the treatment of many diseases, disorders and other physical deficiencies.

Chief among these are ulcerated stomachs and acidosis. Goats' milk, since it is composed of very small fat globules, is easily digested in the most delicate stomach, producing an alkaline reaction. Such are its properties that the digestive process is completed within 20 to 30 minutes.

Sufferers from acidosis also have best suits the curriculum of Brenau. It belongs to the Southern Association of Colleges for Women, the Association of American Colleges, and the Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools of the South.

While Brenau conforms strictly to those standards of accrediting associations, it is more than a standard college. It has long recognized the intense importance of the cultural and fine arts—music, dramatic art, painting, dancing—as essential factors in the education of the modern woman. At Brenau, also, especially, provision has been made for recreational and social entertainment as well as featured above the curriculum, physical education, home economics, a radio program each Monday over WSB, Atlanta, at 6 p. m., standard time, and other subjects.

A limited number of honor and service scholarships are offered at Brenau to ambitious and energetic students for various services rendered.

LIFE INSURANCE STANDS UNSHAKEN

New England Mutual Registers Sharp Increase in First Half of 1933.

Proof of the assertion that "life insurance is the Gibraltar of finance" is graphically cited by Major Robert J. Guinn, general agent of the New England Mutual Life Insurance Company, in pointing to an increase of more than 50 per cent in paid-for business in the Atlanta agency during the first half of 1933 as compared with the like period of 1932.

"Life insurance, he declares, "is the Gibraltar of finance and a haven of refuge for a troubled people when the foundations of society are shaken by worldwide disaster."

In the recent fearful years," he continues, "when nearly all business was losing money, millions were in distress and thousands of trusted financial institutions fell, the great mutual life insurance company of America, with billions of assets unimpaired, stood the storm, unshaken by the worst economic cataclysm in all history."

"Evidence of general improvement in business is reflected in the operations of the company I represent and in those of my own agency. I have no doubt that the operations reported by other major companies and their agencies also are most gratifying."

"In my own agency, the first half of 1933, ending July 1, showed an increase in paid-for business of more than 50 per cent over the same period last year, and reports of the New England Mutual's general business over the country showed that applications for insurance received in June exceeded the number received in any previous month of the company's long history. The paid-for business was

Atlanta Envelope Company Meets All Requirements of NRA Code

Among the large firms in Atlanta which have signed the president's code and become members of the NRA is the Atlanta Envelope Company. The Atlanta Envelope Company, 506-11 Stewart avenue, S. W., with their modern high-speed equipment and trained employees they are able to complete approximately a million envelopes a day.

Mr. Guthman called attention to the fact that by buying from his firm any envelope needed, of any size or style, may be secured with no difficulty since every job is made to the customer's order. Envelopes made to order, he said, actually cost no more and require no longer for delivery than envelopes bought from stock supplies.

Under the new code, no employee in the plant will work more than 35 hours a week, but his salary will be the same as for a 48-hour week, the schedule formerly followed. Workers in the office, shipping department and stockroom will work a total of 40 hours per week. These adjustments have resulted in the employment of a number of new workers.

"We are very glad," Mr. Guthman said, "to co-operate with the president's recovery program by signing the code and making these changes in our plant. While it is going to increase our costs of operation, we are

Under the leadership of W. Lawt Inglis, president of the Cathcart Allied Storage Company, 134 Houston street, N. E., Atlanta storage and household moving establishments have founded what is known as the Confederated Household Goods Movers of Georgia, Atlanta division, in order to co-operate to the fullest extent with the national industrial recovery act.

Following passage of the NRA, Mr. Inglis, realizing the necessity of immediate action to give President Roosevelt wholehearted support in the national crisis, sent out letters to local storage and moving officials, urging them to organize and work out a code of ethics under which to operate until such time as the national code has been accepted.

On June 26 a meeting was held and on July 7 a committee met and named the organization "The Confederated Household Goods Movers of Georgia, Atlanta division." The next task was to agree upon rates and practices of fair competition. At a meeting held August 1 at the Chamber of Commerce building, with about 52 household goods movers present, practically all signed a gentlemen's agreement to operate under a tariff which has been set up by the tariff committee, the same to remain effective until the national code has been accepted.

Under the tentative code the local companies adopted a 40-hour week schedule for the several hundred employees and adjusted wages to meet the requirements of the NRA. This resulted in the immediate employment of scores and brought about substantial increase in pay rolls.

The code under which the Atlanta division will operate will be sent to Washington as a model for a national code for this section, Mr. Inglis said.

Mr. Inglis was elected president of the Confederated Household Goods Movers of Georgia, Atlanta division. Other officers are George Schold, secretary; J. M. Cherry, treasurer; Frank Bumstead, J. U. H. Barker and Harry Zaban, vice presidents.

"We must believe today that all men are members of the great brotherhood of man, that the things which divide them may be minimized and annihilated, and that the things which unite them be strengthened and confirmed by liberal relations of fellowship—group with group—man with man. Let's go into our association with the feeling that tolerance, generosity, and understanding live and grow and that hatred and ill-will wither and die when we follow our code together."

COTTON MARKET ENCOUNTERS CALM IN WEEK'S TRADE

Pegging of Grain Prices, Erratic Stock Course, Estimate's Approach Held Responsible.

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 6.—(AP)—Trading in the cotton market has been rather light during the past week in strong contrast with many weeks immediately preceding. This was due to pegging of prices in the grain markets, the erratic course of the stock market and the near approach of the date for the first government condition report and crop forecasts of the season.

While prices advanced slightly in the early part of the week, they gradually eased off later, mainly due to liquidation in advance of the government report due on Tuesday next.

As the bureau's forecast of the crop will take into consideration abandonment of acreage under the Wallace plan, the impression prevails that an indicated yield in the neighborhood of 11,000,000 bales will be shown. Owing to uncertainty as to the government's figure of the crop, however, there has been considerable liquidation and prices gradually eased off until the close of the week showed a net loss of about $2.25 a bale, or 47 points on October.

The weather is now figuring largely in crop calculations. There has recently been too much rain in the central portions of the belt, causing shedding, stumpy plants and increased weevil activity.

The demand for spots has been very light during the week, due to the erratic course of prices on the one hand and a desire to await the showing of the government report on the other.

High, low and closing sales in futures during the past week compared with a year ago, follow:

	High.	Low.	Close.	Year.
Oct.	10.62	10.06	10.16	6.16
Dec.	10.84	10.25	10.39	6.32
Jan.	10.95	10.43	10.47	6.38
Mar.	10.98	10.50	10.60	6.53
May	11.19	10.71	10.77	6.68

Business Maintains Steady Upward Trend

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—(AP)—Business apparently plans no extended vacation this summer, despite the deep-rooted tradition that holidays are the custom during the torrid days.

Undeterred by mounting thermometer and signs of a leveling off of activity in certain lines, industry generally moved forward again last week. However, the sharp gains which characterized a few trade divisions during the past two months are now absent, and advances are being distributed more uniformly—if not so spectacularly—in other directions.
